

Launceston College

A Multi Academy Trust

Whistleblowing policy

Adopted on	April 2020
Reviewed by	MAT Business Manager
Ratified by	Finance and Assets Committee of the Multi Academy Trust Board
Status	Ratified
Review period	Annually
Review date	April 2021

It is the policy of Launceston College Multi Academy Trust ('MAT') to encourage any employee who has a genuine concern that practices in their MAT do not meet the required standards of probity to raise that concern at an appropriate level and in an appropriate manner.

This policy is also intended to guide any employee who genuinely believes that s/he has a disclosure to make about malpractice in the organisation in making that disclosure. It sets out to whom malpractice (or suspected malpractice) should be reported and how it should be reported.

The policy also sets out the safeguards that the MAT will offer to any employee who makes a disclosure in the recommended way and in good faith.

Definitions and exclusions

The term "malpractice" may cover a broad range of acts, omissions, or practices. What employees may wish to report will usually be a specific instance or instances of wrongdoing on the part of an individual or a group of individuals. However, in certain circumstances, employees may wish to report bad practice which, if it were to continue, would be likely to lead to wrongdoing.

The following examples indicate the type of actions which would normally be inappropriate use of an academy's delegated budget:

- disregard of proper tendering procedure for contracts;
- manipulation or falsification of accounting records;
- making decisions for personal gain;
- inappropriate (e.g. private) use of academy assets;
- abuse of position for personal advantage or gain.

The MAT Funding Agreement, Academy Supplemental Funding Agreements and Scheme of Delegation, set out the standards of good practice to determine whether or not MAT trustees, governors and employees have acted properly.

An action does not have to constitute a criminal offence in order to be classified as "malpractice", although clearly anything that constitutes a criminal offence would almost certainly amount to malpractice.

This procedure is not intended to substitute for other procedures through which employees may raise specific concerns or complaints about their personal treatment. Complaints by employees about their personal treatment by others or about the way in which employment policies and practices have been applied to them (including decisions about pay and grading) should be raised under the MAT's grievance procedure.

Complaints or concerns about the protection of children should normally be raised under the Safeguarding Policy. This procedure would not normally be appropriate for raising concerns about health and safety issues, unless they were related to a broader complaint of malpractice.

Procedure for making a disclosure

The means of making a disclosure will depend to some extent on the nature and seriousness of the concern, the sensitivity of the issues and the individual, or individuals, thought to be involved in the malpractice reported.

As a general rule, an employee wishing to make a disclosure (the "informant") should raise his/her concerns in the first instance with the Principal, Executive Principal or the Chair of Trustees. This would be the normal channel where the concern is about the conduct or practice of immediate colleagues – e.g. a concern that the MAT's policies and procedures are not being properly or fairly applied.

Where an informant genuinely believes that s/he cannot approach the Principal, Executive Principal or the Chair of Trustees, the concern should be raised with the ESFA. This course of action would be appropriate if the disclosure were about the conduct or practice of the MAT Board.

A disclosure may be made verbally (e.g. by telephone) or in writing. An informant should normally identify him/herself and should make it clear that s/he is making a disclosure within the terms of this whistleblowing procedure. Concerns raised in casual conversation do not constitute a disclosure.

An informant raising a concern verbally will normally be expected to support and substantiate those concerns in writing, unless there are special circumstances indicating that this is inappropriate. Informants who feel unable to commit their concerns to writing will normally be asked to meet with an appropriate senior officer, who will compile a written note of the disclosure.

The informant may be accompanied by a trade union representative or friend at any meeting either with the person to whom a disclosure is being made or who has been authorised to conduct an investigation into an allegation of malpractice.

It is not necessary for an informant to produce conclusive evidence to support his/her disclosure. Suspicion may be valid grounds for raising a concern. However, the informant should normally have direct information about, or knowledge of, the malpractice alleged or know where such evidence is located. The informant's concern should be based on more than hearsay, gossip, or the reports of others.

Other than in very exceptional circumstances, disclosures should not be made to the press, radio, television or other news media. The recommended internal reporting channels should be used. Employees have certain rights under the Public Interest Disclosure Act to report malpractice to specified external agencies (e.g. an employee who suspects that a criminal act has been committed may inform the police). However, it would be expected that an informant would make any disclosure in the first instance either within the MAT or to the ESFA, as set out above.

Responding to a disclosure

The response to an informant's disclosure will depend on a number of factors such as the seriousness and complexity of the allegations made. Allegations may be:

- investigated within the MAT.
- referred to the MAT's Responsible Officer and/or auditors;
- referred to the police;
- referred to another independent form of enquiry;
- (or any combination of the above).

Disclosures will be subject to initial enquiries in order to decide whether a full investigation is necessary and, if so, what form it should take, who should conduct it, and whether any reference to another agency is necessary or desirable. Some concerns may be resolved through agreed action without the need for further investigation.

If the informant's concern falls within the scope of an alternative procedure, s/he will be advised to pursue it through that procedure.

An informant who presents his/her disclosures in writing will receive written acknowledgement, and will be informed of the outcome of any investigation. The extent of the information given to informants will depend upon a number of factors, e.g. whether the investigation is referred to the police and leads to criminal prosecution. Where an investigation is protracted, the officer dealing with the matter will normally report to the informant on the progress of the investigation.

Where an informant is unwilling to identify him/herself, any person receiving a complaint about malpractice should log the incident and consult the Executive Principal/Principal/Chair of Trustees to decide whether or not any investigation should be undertaken.

Safeguards for informants

The decision to report malpractice can be a difficult one for an employee, who may possibly fear subsequent victimisation or harassment. No action will be taken against an employee who has raised a concern in good faith, even if that concern is seen to be unfounded after investigation.

However, informants who are themselves the subject of investigation or action under formal procedure (e.g. discipline, capability or harassment) should not necessarily expect that the procedure will be discontinued as a result of their disclosure.

Victimisation or harassment of an employee who has raised a concern in good faith, or any other attempt at reprisal either by an employee whose conduct is the subject of investigation or others; will be considered a disciplinary offence.

Where informants do not wish to be identified to others in the course of an investigation that wish will be respected in so far as it is reasonably practicable. However anonymity cannot be guaranteed. The process of investigation may reveal the identity of informants and, especially in serious cases, informants may be required to give evidence, either by the MAT, the ESFA, or the Police. Any person subject to disciplinary action or prosecution would have access to such evidence. Informants who are subsequently required to give evidence will be given all reasonable and practicable support and protection from reprisals.

The MAT and the ESFA will take all reasonable steps to minimise any difficulties informants may experience as a result of raising a genuine concern. Informants who are required to give evidence in disciplinary or criminal proceedings may seek advice from the ESFA on procedural aspects of this obligation. The MAT will consider sympathetically requests from informants for special leave, counselling or other support.

False or malicious allegations

If an allegation is made or a concern is raised in good faith, no action will be taken against an informant. However, malicious, or vexatious allegations, or disclosures made for personal gain will be considered as disciplinary offences and are likely to result in disciplinary action being taken against the informant.